

ABDUCTION

He felt the need to get in contact with human beings but, as soon as they saw the lights of his stellar vehicle, they ran away terrified.

One night, he approached a house in the suburbs of Cambridge. Everybody was sleeping, so he operated the silencer and lowered the light intensity as much as he could. Next, he got in the garden and met a cat which was staring at him. Then, he petted the cat's head with his long fingers, but the animal's snorting confused him. He hugged the cat to let it know he was a friend so that it would trust him. Suddenly, the cat started to meow, first in a chopping manner but, later, it meowed continuously, like an endless cry. He imitated it and both of them were addressing their moaning to the Moon for five minutes. All of a sudden, he understood it was in heat.

He ran towards his spaceship, intending to resolve the issue. It was then that the lights of a room were switched on.

Micro-stories collection: "Maybe or Perhaps"

Jesús Claver Giménez