

IN ANOTHER TIME I WOULD HAVE WANTED TO HAVE YOU

In another time I would have wanted to have you.

To know that you were mine.

To feel safe in your adored stele.

I left myself be carried away by my people,

I must say,

I rebelled against everything established,

It's true.

I wandered the roads in confusion,

I enjoyed the happy moments,

I breathed the leaden air of adversitiy

My girl and I, young idealists,

We built the future

Whithout ceasing to show solidarity.

I learnt, eventually, to look in the mirror.

I know that growth comes through dialogue

And that green is the colour of hope.

I know that rickets lurks when there is no horizon

Because dogma, from its watchtower, threatens and imposes itself.

I believe in man by nature limited

And distrust you: unique truth,

The daughter of an absolute and infallible divinity.

So much depth in this bucolic spot!

Aragonian, haven of jazz, at the City of Water.
