

INTIMATE PACT WITH BLOOD IN HOSPITAL

We are at peace is an expression which means agreement with the outcome of a conflict, either because there is a balance between the parties or because, if it goes on, it could end badly.

“Well, we are adults now and we’ve known each other quite well for a long time. So, tonight will be the last night I will passionately greet you in the reserved area of the airport after your unexpected return from Paris, and you will stop leering at me through your binoculars from your office near the Eiffel Tower.

By the way, I’ll go and get dressed. Buttoned dressing gowns seem more appropriate for our new relationship. Stop staring at me, you make me nervous. I won’t stand for it any longer.”

She threw a glass against the bathroom mirror. One of the pieces hit her hand. Thick drops of blood fell on the room floor

Collection of micro-stories: “Maybe or perhaps”