THE WAY

From the depths of absolute nothingness,

Peering into the abyss of life,

Of your being to desire tied

You form the promised existence.

Tender figure you emerge consummated.

Defenceless, alone before the light,

You get into the world, surprised,

Shaping yourself at every daybreak.

Uncertain the day gets presented,

But, if with love, patience and word,

Doggedly, your surroundings nourish you,

Emerges a subtle, warm wake, thirsty

For horizons, that, after the splendour

Of struggle, encourages and affirms you.
