SILENCE IN THE LIVING ROOM

“Tomorrow you can buy your damn notebooks. I don't understand this excessive desire to instill in him a taste for painting. The painter is born and made. In that field he is totally flat, he has never stood out for his creativity. What he likes is going sailing with me.”

“My father loves to go around with his yacht, acting handsome and bragging about being a lucky man. He is like a big boy.”

“What my husband doesn't know is that the notebooks are for my lover's daughter. I've been looking at her prints for a while now and I'm impressed. Even though she is still a child, she is wonderful at watercolors.

Collection of short stories: “Maybe or perhaps” (2005 -)

Jesús Claver Giménez